I am a collaborative developer and former small business owner who genuinely enjoys solving problems and creating things that work and improve the lives of others. I bring a unique perspective that blends technical skills with firsthand experience understanding customer needs and running a business. Whether I'm writing clean, efficient JavaScript or improving a feature based on user feedback, I'm driven by curiosity, empathy, and a love for figuring things out. With experience in frontend development, QA leadership, and business ownership, I'm just as comfortable diving into code as I am brainstorming with a team to get things done.
